Expected Hours:	Up to 10 hours/week
Open to:	Undergraduate & Master's students
Compensation Range:	Undergraduate = $21-22/hour Master's = $26.32/hour

The Othering and Belonging Institute brings together researchers, stakeholders, policymakers, and communicators to identify and challenge the barriers to an inclusive, just, and sustainable society and to create transformative change.

The Institute's Network for Transformative Change is seeking a student researcher assistant for Spring 2023 to support efforts to broaden our work building partnership with social justice organizations in Latin America leading up to the 2023 O&B Conference.

Brief Description of Role

The successful candidate will be responsible for assisting the team in researching the current landscape of social movements, organizing and climate justice issues in Latin America. Additional work will include project related tasks to support communication and outreach efforts leading up to the O&B conference.

For this role, experience in social science research, reviews of literature (scholarly and/or mass media), and analysis are essential skills. Experience with and understanding of social movements and Latin American current political and climate issues would be helpful, and interest in social justice issues is important.

Responsibilities

- Social science research
- Summarizing, reporting, and critically analyzing existing research

- Participating in project meetings

Qualifications

Required:

- Pursuing Bachelor's or Master's degree
- Interest in issues of social justice as demonstrated through previous work/projects
- Strong research and data analysis skills
- Proficient in MS Word, MS Excel, or similar software
- Excellent communication and presentation skills
- Ability to meet rapidly changing deadlines
- Strong organizational skills and the ability to work independently
- Spanish language skills with an emphasis on reading fluency

Desired:

- Experience with and/or interest in Latin America social justice movements
- Portuguese language skills
